

1114
8 05
2
y 1

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS.

PS1114

Chap. .... Copyright No. ....

Shelf B2805

1792

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

L. C.

The Old Man of the Mountain * *

EASTERN POINT LIGHT

* * And Old Mother Ann.

THE OLD MAN OF THE MOUNTAIN

AND

OLD MOTHER ANN.

Hastina
BY ADA C. BOWLES.

COPYRIGHT, 1892, BY FRANC A. PRATT.

BOSTON:
PRESS OF ANNA FLORENCE GRANT.
1892.

26088 X
re
JUN 27 1892

w.m.s., July 14, 1920

HAVE you heard the North Wind telling,
With its whistling and its yelling,
In a gale,
Of that poor New Hampshire farmer
And his wicked fairy charmer? —
Such a tale !

HOW he lov'd and how she spurned him ;
How at last to stone she turned him,
Cold and still ;
And she said, " Since you aspire,
I will raise you somewhat higher
On this hill."

THEN she ran away and left him
(For a giant could not heft him,—
This stone man),
Ran away, 'till worn and footsore,
She sat down upon the sea-shore
At Cape Ann.

BUT this “Old Man of the Mountain,”
He just started a tear fountain
From his eyes;
And he said, “I have a notion
When it reaches to the ocean,
I shall rise.”

"OLD MAN OF THE MOUNTAIN," WHITE MOUNTAIN, N. H.

WHEN the bitter North Wind shifted,
The old man, behold! was lifted
Wholly free;
And he knew that his tear fountain
Had connected his grim mountain
With the sea.

THEN he called the gods to aid him
Catch the fairy who betrayed him,
In disguise
Of a fair and lovely woman
Who had seemed so very human
To his eyes.

WHEN he found her, then he seized her
Round the waist, you see, he seized her
With a roar;
And he cried, "You 'll find me stronger
And my arms a little longer
Than before."

THEN she grew to stone just like him,
With no power left to strike him
Dead and cold;
And he said, "Tho' you 're so clever,
You shall just sit there forever
And grow old."

S O beside the sea he set her
Where the waves forever fret her
Saucily;
Not a witch, and not a woman,
But a creature quite inhuman,
Such as he.

“O LD Mother Ann,” they called her,
Sitting where the sea had walled her,
On the shore.
In a storm you hear her groaning
And her wickedness bemoaning
O'er and o'er.

"OLD MOTHER ANN," AT EASTERN POINT, GLOUCESTER.

BUT no sooner was she seated
Than the old man he retreated,
No more free,
And against the same White Mountain,
With his frozen-up tear fountain,
Sticketh he.

BUT when every Christian nation
Shall make joyful proclamation
"War is dead!
It shall rule the world no longer,
Love is better far and stronger,
Hate has fled."

THEN the "Old Man of the Mountain"
Will again, by his tear fountain,
Be set free;
And, without a wish to harm her,
He will once more seek his charmer
By the sea;

AND he'll say, "Let's be forgiving,
Make our lives more worthy living
If we can;
I believe 't will make us human,
Just a man and just a woman,
Mother Ann."

“BUT we ’ll leave our shells behind us,
Where they ever may remind us
Of the past;
As a sad and solemn warning
Against all hate and scorning
That shall last.”

Post

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

0 016 115 815 A ●